

April 5, 2006

I have serious concerns with Walmart getting into the banking business.

One - they seem to be very adept at breaking rules and laws....frankly, I do not trust them.

Two - they will make it difficult for smaller banks to stay in business, that...

three - may make it hard for local businesses to secure banking or loans if Walmart refuses their business if they are selling a similar product or service....and since Walmart has their greedy fingers in just about everything...this could be a big problem.

four - wouldn't it be dangerous to allow the largest corporation in the world to get into banking...seems like too much control to me.

Finally, I urge all of the directors to attend this hearing....this is a very serious matter that requires your attention.

Laurie Quintiliani